Dear Friends of Charlottesville Catholic School:

It has been 10 years since I was welcomed to Charlottesville Catholic School. With this graduating class, every child who was here at this school when I began my tenure in the 2012-2013 school year will be an alumni. If you have seen my office, you know that every graduating class' picture lines my wall. It warms my heart to hear about all the wonderful things the alumni have done. It has been a joy to be part of this community for a decade!

The most recent twenty-four months however, have challenged all of us to stay focused as we have worked diligently to have children continue to learn in this building. We have learned a lot during this time and are proud of the hard work we have put in to remain open. The faculty and staff have risen to meet each new challenge and continue to be the heart and soul of CCS. I look forward to seeing where CCS goes next.

Thank you all for your continued support.

In Christ,

Michael Riley, Ed.D.

Service Given

Community service is at the heart and soul of everything we do at Charlottesville Catholic School. In addition to individual student public service commitment, teachers and parents also involve themselves in supporting the community through direct involvement with community service projects and local charities.

Dr. Michal Salerno Merit Scholarship Caroline Fowlkes

CCS is honored to be able to offer a scholarship to a rising 6th or 7th grade Charlottesville Catholic School student funded by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Palumbo. The Dr. Michael Salerno Scholarship in the amount of $1,000 will be awarded based on academic merit, character, active participation in the school and community, and membership in a Catholic parish.

A member of Church of the Incarnation, Caroline Fowlkes stays active by serving the parish as an usher of mass, member of the choir, PACEM, and the annual fish fry. Additionally, Caroline is active in the school community by participating in Girls on the Move, Knitting Club, and volunteering for morning and afternoon prayers. She is a passionate athlete maintaining excellence in school while being a multi-sport player, and serves as a role model for all. She is kind, honest, responsible, and cares for everyone. Congratulations to Caroline Fowlkes.

Paul Zacharias Memorial Scholarship Aydalin Swift

CCS is honored to be able to offer a scholarship to a rising middle school student funded by the Paul Zacharias Memorial Fund. Mr. Zacharias was a beloved middle school Latin teacher for twelve years at Charlottesville Catholic School. His unexpected passing in February of 2014 led the Charlottesville Catholic Community to remember his commitment to students and serving Christ through the establishment of this fund. The Paul Zacharias Scholarship is in the amount of $750 will be awarded to a rising 6th, 7th, or 8th grader based on character and service to the community.

Aydalin Swift has been an amazing addition to the CCS school community. Her teachers describe her as a diligent student who displays respect, responsibility, and trustworthiness. Additionally, Aydalin is active in her church youth group and has participated in the Habitat for Humanity Rake-a-Thon, peer mentoring services, and works the nursery at her church. Congratulations to Aydalin Swift.

Grace Cullen Cantonwine Memorial Scholarship Alice Thompson

Paul and Sheila Cantonwine created this scholarship in memory of their daughter they lost at birth in March of 1999. It allowed them to turn something so devastating into something beautiful. The Knights of Columbus helped the Cantonwines establish the Grace Cullen Cantonwine Memorial Scholarship fund which is now housed as part of the McMahon Parater Foundation for Education. This $500 award is matched by the Knights of Columbus for a total of $1,000. All applicants must be a rising 8th grader and have good standing academically. They also must be an involved citizen in their school and their community.

As an eighth grade student, Alice Thompson exemplifies hard work and dedication in and out of the classroom. She is a member of the National Junior Honor Society and Faith in Action. In both of these school organizations, she works on projects that benefit the community. Creating care bags for UVA hospital, labeling hand sanitizer, and raising money for a child with cancer are all examples of her service to others. She is a driven student, working diligently in the classroom, but also lending a helping hand to her teachers. Congratulations to Alice Thompson.

Class of 2021!

Hello,

My name is Joey Michel, and I was part of the CCS class of 2010; back when the closest thing to a “STEM Wing” we had was dissecting a chicken wing from a Kroger 12 pack. I am currently finishing up my foundational rotations as a 3rd year medical student at UVA. In many ways my path to becoming a physician, and more specifically a pediatrician, has roots in my time at CCS.

For example, with encouragement from Ms. Searforce I took a leap of faith to become the only guy in the choir, which was not the most socially secure spot for a quiet 11 year old. But without that influence, I may not have continued to pursue music throughout my education. In the end, it was peers in my college a cappella group that mentored me as I explored my interest in and committed to medicine, bringing me to where I am today.

What made you want to be a Pediatrician? When did you know?

I grew up in a medical family, so there is no denying that I may have had a little tunnel vision when considering what I wanted to do when I grew up. With that said, I entertained a variety of fields before finding my home in medicine. In high school, I was in the Math Engineering and Science Academy at Albemarle high school with thoughts of pursuing biomedical engineering. As I moved through high school, I realized that my strengths lie in my ability to connect with and support people rather than in direct application of basic science. I entered college majoring in Kinesiology with thoughts of becoming a physical therapist. It wasn't until I took a Sociology of Healthcare course in my late 2nd year that I committed myself to medicine. It was there that I first explored social determinants of health and healthcare inequities. I remember sitting in the library early on a Sunday morning watching a documentary about the reactionary nature of our healthcare system and how preventative primary care was the solution. For the first time I felt a true calling, a vocation by all definitions. The career of a primary care physician consists of endless opportunities to support patients not only through prescriptions, but also by means of education and counseling. This chance to form long-term relationships with my patients to advance their health is what sparked a fire in me, and helps me get up in the morning when I have to go see patients in the hospital before the crack of dawn.

These opportunities for long-term preventative care are magnified in pediatrics. Everyday you are working to prevent health issues in the future and support the growth of remarkable kiddos. Growing up, I never had younger siblings, so in a way I feel like I'm drawn to the kids I've helped take care of as if I'm a protective older brother. I just want them to be happy and healthy. That could manifest as getting the antibiotics a child needs to cure an infection, being the first adult to use a young teen's preferred pronouns thereby reducing their risk of self-harm by half, or counseling a family about a new long term diagnosis. It's all about setting up that person for success in the long run. In short, the days I have experienced the most joy in medical school are the days I get to laugh with kids, and the days I've had the most meaning are when I get to support them and their families in times of uncertainty.

What was it like for you at Charlottesville Catholic? Did you have a favorite teacher?

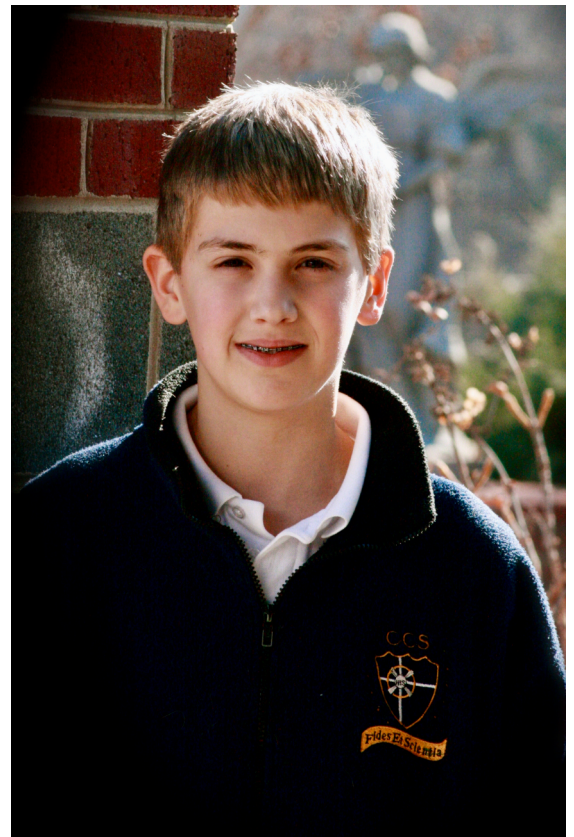

Looking back, the teachers made my experience at CCS. I was a pretty sensitive kid, and the support that I got from them at every level helped me grow into the confident young man that I am today. Some all-stars that I would be remiss if I didn't give a shout-out include Ms. M, Mrs. McCormick, and Ms. Searforce. They seemed to identify the parts of me that I was insecure about and foster them to be strengths. My heart, my mind, and my voice were bolstered by their care and attention.

Did you feel prepared for high school? In what way?

I'm not going to lie, the transition from CCS to high school was challenging, but that is true of any transition. Academically, I found the expectations of my teachers at CCS set me up for success at Albemarle, especially when it came to the humanities. The biggest culture shock for me going from CCS to Albemarle was the tendency of some of my peers to not be respectful to our teachers. While I admit I griped about some of the rules and regulations of CCS while I was there, the level of respect shown to the faculty created an environment in which they respected and supported us as well. I will say, the challenge came with integrating into the public school system socially, and for that I have some advice; lean on your CCSers who come with you to highschool, join a sport or club early to meet new people and branch out, and pursue what you like to do regardless of what others think.

What words of advice do you have for our students?

1. Live your life with the attitude that everyone around you could be having a bad day, and your energy and warmth could be the thing that turns it around. So be kind, considerate, and a light to others.
2. Don't be afraid to express yourself. You have endless possibilities ahead of you and your belief in yourself is one of the only things in your way.
3. While it is important to study hard and think of the next steps, try not to get too worked up about the ifs, ands, or buts. You are going to make a lot of decisions in your life, some right and some wrong, but the most important thing is to take stock of the present moment and how you can be your best self in the now.

Charlottesville Catholic School could not be more proud of 6th grade student, Olivia Goodwin, who was recognized National Athlete of the Year by Virginia Commonwealth Games. She was further nominated for the National Congress of State Games (NCSG) Athlete of the Year award. Virginia was honored for the 3rd time in the last 5 years to have one of the national winners. Congratulations Olivia!

Olivia Goodwin, 11, swims for the absolute love of the sport. Being in the pool is not something she takes for granted, as she was born with a congenital heart defect. Olivia is already on her third pacemaker, causing consistency in the pool to be challenging. Often times, she had been peaking in her swimming only to need heart surgery and end up out of the water for six months. Following surgery, it takes her about another six months to get back to her pre-operation weight and performance level. Overall, it can be very frustrating for someone who simply wants to swim and train. Olivia understands that her medical issues are part of her story, but she never uses it as an excuse. She continues to swim, work hard, and believes that one day she will place in an event. The sport of swimming has also given her discipline, organization, and time management skills; all of which are keys to being a successful adult. It has also taught her sportsmanship, teamwork, and how to be humble. This is visible as Olivia attends her younger sisters swim meets and as they do well and succeed. Olivia cheers them on and does not dwell on the fact that she has a pacemaker and they do not. Olivia's triumphs are not awards on the podium; they are completing a 500-meter freestyle exactly a year after heart surgery and competing in events even though she knew she would come in last place. Olivia embodies the spirit and drive of competition and always strives for excellence, no matter what obstacles may be in the way.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (CBS19 NEWS) -- A local 11-year-old is being recognized across the state for her win at an Olympic-style competition.

Olivia Goodwin won the Youth Female Athlete of the Year at the Commonwealth Games. The competition is modeled after the Olympics and welcomes all athletes regardless of age or skill level.

Goodwin has been swimming most of her life and says the water feels like home. The sixth-grader is always striving for excellence; no matter what's in her way.

Goodwin swam in the 500M-free exactly one year after having heart surgery; she's now on her third pacemaker.

She said her obstacles inspire her to keep going. "There's a fire in me, I know that I'm different, but if you love something, just do it. Just keep on going," said Goodwin.

Her heart condition interferes with practice and during peak performance. It can be frustrating at times, but she said it doesn't define her and made her who she is today.

Goodwin's determination and grit inspire those around her, especially her family.

"She is the rock of the family, no matter how tough things can be there's always something to be thankful for," said Olivia's mother, Marissa Goodwin.

Olivia's heart is that of a champion. She believes that anyone can do anything.

"Just keep persevering and follow your dreams," she said.

Her hard work has also inspired her two younger sisters to follow in her footsteps, and Olivia is proud to cheer them on.

The Education Improvement Scholarships Tax Credits Program

EISTC is designed to allow families who traditionally could not afford private education the choice to do so. In Charlottesville, we are the only school eligible to receive donations through the McMahon Parater Foundation. Each gift allows us to find more student who qualify, both helping our enrollment and changing their lives.

Donations given between July 1, 2020 and June 30, 2021 allowed 36 students to attend Charlottesville Catholic School for the 2020-2021 school year with the help of a tax donation award. The award is determined by the locality in which they live, therefore the rate is different for each student. Money raised this fiscal year has increased the number of opportunities for children to attend our school. Each of these families is eternally grateful to this program, which allows them to make the decision to come here.

On behalf of the families and students, we thank our generous EISTC donors:

“We are grateful to be recipients of the Educational Improvement Scholarships Tax Credits. We believe in the Virginia Constitution prohibiting using public money for private schools. We also believe in the value of educational choices. Donors who support these scholarships are making a difference in the lives of families who are the primary educators of their children. At Charlottesville Catholic School, our family’s values are supported and strengthened in powerful ways. Without the assistance of Educational Improvement Scholarships Tax Credits, Catholic education would be completely out of reach for us. There are so many other families just like us who depend on these scholarships. It is our deepest hope that all parents can be encouraged, not blocked, to find opportunities for their children that best support their unique values and help shape the leaders of tomorrow. “
